THE WITNESS: If ECFMG were alerted by the USMLE program that they had information that an individual may have been a student at Optima University, ECFMG would flag their record. BY DR. THOMAS: Q. Could you explain what flagging a record means? A. Flagging, at least with respect to ECFMG, means that no automated process could take place without a staff member knowing about it. Q. So, in order for a student to get flagged, what exactly would have to be done? And let me just clarify the question: How would you make the decision to flag said student?	5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18	specifically the national board would say you should now unflag, that they would notify us of the final outcome of the case. We would then, on our own, unflag the record. Q. If a case is found indeterminate and the student is offered a validation exam, at what point would they be unflagged? MS. McENROE: Objection to form. A. I think at that point they would still remain flagged. Q. If a student fails a validation exam, would the account remain flagged? MS. McENROE: Objection to form. A. As I said before, with respect to the seven-year requirement for ECFMG certification, if the individual did not have a passing score on Step 1 I mean Step 2 CK and Step 2 CS, that Step 1 score would have become voided for purposes of ECFMG certification. MS. McENROE: Objection to form. A. Okay. And I'll answer kind of clarifying: You're referring to the request that the seven-year maximum amount of time to pass the exams required in order for the ECFMG certification to be extended. Q. Be extended. A. And the answer to that is, depending upon if that had been extended, depending upon how long it was extended, it is possible that that score, for purposes of ECFMG certification, could be valid. Q. So, just to clarify: If ECFMG's committee had granted the request for the waiver to the seven-year rule by granting an extension that went past that February 14th, 2013 date, which would have been the seven-year mark, is it safe to say that the Step 1 would not have expired?
